Collections from West Papua	p. 31-33

This is an overview of collections of photographs from Papua New Guinea – formerly the British and German colonies – and West Papua, the former Dutch colony. The West Papuan section – at the end of the list - has been put together with the help of Volkerkunde Museum in Leiden, the Netherlands, and for the Papua New Guinea section numerous archives have been most helpful with information.

The collections are organised chronologically and mostly under the names of the photographers. Toward the end, a special section is given to photo studios, and another for mission archives and other collections where photographs by different photographers from different times are mixed.

Several collections hold photographs from other Pacific islands or other countries, but the numbers given here refer only to the photographs from New Guinea when that number can be estimated.

There are several photographs which have appeared in old books and publications which I have not (yet) found in any archive. Some of these are likely to surface in the future. Photographs from a few books have been included in the list due to their assumed importance.

Modern spelling of place names is used in the list, rather than the spelling found in old captions and reports.

The collections hold photographs of traditional life, of expatriate, colonial activity, and everything in between. The list does not show the quality, the historical or other importance of the different collections but has included all which have been identified, only listed roughly by date. A collection of only a few photographs can thus be seen next to a large collection of thousands, and one of obvious or general historical importance might be listed next to a family album.

Two previous overviews have been essential for this updated and extended listing: the South Seas Photograph Collections list by Ewan Maidment of the Pacific Manuscript Bureau (2011); and Max Quanchi's list of archives and collections from British New Guinea/Papua in his Photographing Papua (2004). I am indebted to them for giving me an excellent starting point for this work.

I expect that there will be suggestions for additions or improvements of the list. Such are most welcome, and I intend to update when needed.

Searching the list by location name, photographer's name, or by archive abbreviation.

To search in this PDF document, you click the search function (a magnifying glass icon at top left). At top right will appear a 'Find' window, and here you write the name you are searching for: a location, a photographer's name or the identifier for an archive. All matching names in the document will be highlighted, and you move on from one to the next by using the 'Next' button in the search window.

Below you will find a listing of all concerned archives with their abbreviations. This is followed by the geographical names which are used in the list and which can be used when searching.

Location names are used in the Papua New Guinea sections as follows:

Collections covering large parts of the former colonies are marked BNG, Papua, GNG, or 'all PNG'.

Most collections are marked by Province or District, or by the names of rivers, bays or islands.

'North coast' is used for the coast from Finschhafen to Vanimo.

Village names and names of small islands are generally not used, but with some exceptions.

The location below show which names are found in the list. The names in brackets are only used a few places.

Example: A search for photos from Madang area can best be found by writing 'Astrolabe Bay'. The village of Siar, which appears in many early Madang photographs, is also named a few places.
